Vaccine Cuts HIV Infection

For first time, drug regime is shown to prevent disease

BANGKOK | For the first time, an experimental vaccine has prevented infection with the AIDS virus, a watershed event in the deadly epidemic and a surprising result. Recent failures led many scientists to think such a vaccine might never be possible.

The World Health Organization and the U.N. agency UNAIDS said the results "instilled new hope" in the field of HIV vaccine research, although researchers say it likely will be many years before a vaccine might be available.

The vaccine — a combination of two previously unsuccessful vaccines — cut the risk of becoming infected with HIV by more than 31 percent in the world's largest AIDS vaccine trial of more than 16,000 volunteers in Thailand, researchers announced Thursday in Bangkok.

Even though the benefit is modest, "it's the first evidence that we could have a safe and effective preventive vaccine," Col. Jerome Kim told The Associated Press. He helped lead the study for the U.S. Army, which sponsored it with the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases. (AP)

We're Now Too Drunk to Do a Headline

A British prison says a bunch of inmates have been caught using hand sanitizing gel to get drunk. Peter McParlin of the Prison Officers Association says inmates at Verne prison in Dorset were using it to make illicit alcohol. The gel had been distributed in the prison to stop the spread of the swine flu virus. McParlin said on Thursday that giving inmates access to a gel with alcohol in it was unwise. The prison has now banned inmates from using it. McParlin said the use of the illicit concoctions — made by mixing alcohol with fruit, water and sugar — was as bad as drug use. (AP)

Feds Probe Hanging Of Worker

Census employee was found dead in rural Ky. cemetery

MANCHESTER, KY. | When Bill Sparkman told retired trooper Gilbert Acciardo he was going door-to-door collecting census data in rural Kentucky, the ex-law enforcement member drew on years of experience for a warning: "Be careful."

Sparkman

Sparkman, 51, was found this month hanged from a tree near a Kentucky cemetery with the word "fed" scrawled on his chest, a law enforcement official said Wednesday, and the FBI is investigating whether he was a victim of anti-government sentiment.

"Even though he was with the Census Bureau, sometimes people can view someone with any government agency as 'the government,'" Acciardo said.

The Census Bureau has suspended door-to-door interviews in rural Clay County, where the body was found, until the investigation is complete, an official said. (AP)

G-20 Summit Starts Amid Clashes

Leaders reach basic agreement on limits for bankers' salaries

PITTSBURGH | Turning from outright fear to cautious optimism, world leaders descended on the comeback city of Pittsburgh Thursday to debate how to nurture a recovering but still-wobbly global economy. The leaders reached a basic agreement on one of the more contentious issues: restricting bankers' compensation.

Nerves are still on edge, but this summit of the world's 20 leading economies seems free of the crisis atmosphere that hung over the past two summits.

It was less calm on the streets, where police threw canisters of pepper spray and smoke at demonstrators after marchers responded to calls to disperse by rolling trash bins and throwing rocks.

A year after the financial meltdown began, the leaders had a panic-free agenda for an opening dinner, to be followed by a full day of talks.

They'll be taking stock of the overall world economy, deciding whether to curb bankers' pay, setting universal rules for bank reserves and plotting an exit strategy from trillions in stimulus spending. The leaders will also grapple with the next steps in combating global warming.

On the pay issue, Europeans in particular pressed for strict limits on salaries and bonuses for executives of financial institutions to keep them from being rewarded for the risky practices that contributed to the financial crisis. "Europeans are horrified by banks — some reliant on taxpayers' money — once again paying exorbitant bonuses," said European Commission President Jose Manuel Barroso.

Insisting "this is not a witch hunt against bankers," Barroso said the EU was urging G-20 partners to stop the pay practice, "building on measures already taken in Europe and elsewhere." (AP)

SWINE FLU Shot of Good News More swine flu vaccine will arrive the first week of October than officials previously thought — between 6 million and 7 million doses. That's roughly double earlier predictions, and most will be the nasal spray version called Flu-Mist, Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius said Thursday. Lots of flu shots will soon follow: About 40 million vaccine doses will arrive by mid-October, with between 10 million and 20 million more arriving each week, she said. (AP)

Kennedy Ally Set To Fill Senate Seat

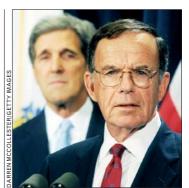

Mass. gov. appoints Kirk for interim post until special election

BOSTON | Gov. Deval Patrick named former Democratic Party chairman Paul G. Kirk Jr. to the late-Edward Kennedy's Senate seat Thursday and said the rushed, temporary appointment was necessary because the issues before Congress were "too important to Massachusetts for us to be one voice short."

Kirk, a Kennedy family friend, served on the senator's staff for eight years and is chairman of the John F. Kennedy Library Foundation.

Kennedy's widow, Vicki Kennedy, and son Edward Kennedy Jr. had urged Patrick to pick Kirk and attended the announcement at the Massachusetts Statehouse.

setts in the Senate of the United States was the highest honor that he could possibly imagine, and it is certainly nothing that I imagined, but it will be my highest honor, as well," said Kirk. He will be sworn in Friday afternoon.

Patrick's appointment means Kirk will serve in the interim post until voters pick a replacement in a Jan. 19 special election. Kirk said he would not be a candidate in the special election. GLEN JOHNSON (AP)

U.N. Backs Nuclear Restrictions

Obama presides over Security Council as it votes to curb weapons

UNITED NATIONS | With President Obama presiding, the U.N. Security Council on Thursday unanimously endorsed a strategy aimed at halting the spread of nuclear weapons and ultimately eliminating them, to usher in a world with "undiminished security for all."

"That can be our destiny," Obama declared after the 15-nation body adopted the U.S.-initiated resolution at an unprecedented summit session. "We will leave this meeting with a renewed determination to achieve this shared goal."

The lengthy document was aimed, in part, at the widely denounced nuclear programs of Iran and North Korea, although they were not named. It also reflected Obama's ambitious agenda to embrace treaties and other agreements leading toward a nuclear weapon-free world.

On both counts, Thursday's 15-0 vote delivered a global consensus that may add political impetus to dealing with nuclear violators, advancing arms control in interna-

Iraq Hunts for 16 Who Fled Prison

Five criminals linked to al-Qaeda among the escaped convicts

BAGHDAD | U.S. aircraft and Iraqi patrols combined in a massive manhunt Thursday after the escape of 16 prisoners — including five inmates linked to al-Qaeda and awaiting execution — who apparently crawled through a bathroom window in a makeshift jail on a former compound of Saddam Hussein's.

The jailbreak in Saddam's hometown of Tikrit highlighted the struggle for Iraqi authorities to maintain control of an overcrowded prison system and absorb thousands of detainees turned over by U.S. forces as part of a broad security pact. At least two senior officials were fired after the late-Wednesday escape.

Few details on the fugitives were provided by Iraqi security chiefs. But five were Iraqis who were sentenced to death for terrorism-related crimes and links to al-Qaeda in Iraq, a Tikrit police officer said on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to discuss the operation with the media.

The other 11 escaped convicts were jailed on charges that include kidnapping and murder, and some were awaiting sentencing, the officer said. At least one — a 19-year-old inmate — was recaptured early Thursday.

A full-scale curfew was imposed on the city of 250,000 after the escape and was eased before sundown on Thursday.

Treasures Shed Light on Dark Ages

Amateur finds hoard of seventh-century artifacts in England

LONDON | An amateur treasure hunter prowling English farmland with a metal detector stumbled upon the largest Anglo-Saxon treasure ever found, a massive seventh-century hoard of gold and silver sword decorations, crosses and other items, British archaeologists said Thursday.

One expert said the treasure found by 55-year-old Terry Herbert would revolutionize understanding of the Anglo-Saxons, a Germanic people who ruled England from the fifth century until the Norman conquest in 1066. Another said the find would rank among Britain's best-known historic treasures.

"This is just a fantastic find, completely out of the blue," Roger Bland, who managed the cache's excavation, told The Associated

The Anglo-Saxons, a group of Germanic tribes, gradually invaded England by sea starting in the fifth century in the wake of the collapse of the Roman Empire.

Their artisans made striking objects out of gold and enamel, and created poetry including "Beowulf," an anonymous epic poem about a warrior who battles monsters and a dragon.

Archaeologist Kevin Leahy, who cataloged the find, said the stash appeared to be war loot and included dozens of pommel caps — decorative elements attached to the knobs of sword handles. He noted that "Beowulf" contains a reference to warriors' stripping the pommels of their enemies' weapons.

Bland said the hoard was unearthed in what was once Mercia, one of five main Anglo-Saxon kingdoms. RAPHAEL G. SATTER (AP)

Metro Notes

opens doors MetroOpensDoors.com

Track maintenance is vital to the safe efficient operation of Metrorail.

Because Metrorail was designed with only two tracks and we have extended weekend hours, major maintenance often affects service.

On Columbus Day Weekend, from 9:30 p.m., on Friday, October 9, until 5 a.m. Tuesday, October 13, we will replace four rail switches on the Green and Yellow lines at the L'Enfant Plaza Metrorail station. This means that the Waterfront-SEU and the Archives-Navy Memorial-Penn Quarter Metrorail stations will be closed and there will be no Yellow or Green Line service to L'Enfant Plaza, though, Blue and Orange Line service will continue. Metro will provide free shuttle bus service to replace the rail service affected by this maintenance.

We will also conduct our annual safety inspection of the Yellow Line Bridge across the Potomac River that same weekend. This means that the Yellow Line will operate from Huntington Station to Pentagon Metrorail station only. The Blue Line will offer the only rail transportation across the Potomac River.

As the weekend approaches check our web site, www.metroopensdoors.com, for the specifics. We appreciate your patience as we work to keep the Metrorail system operating safely and efficiently.

Graham Aide Accused of Bribery

D.C. councilman's chief of staff indicted in taxicab bill scandal

WASHINGTON | The chief of staff for D.C. Council member Jim Graham was arrested and indicted Thursday on bribery charges alleging he promoted taxicab legislation in exchange for cash.

Graham recently introduced legislation that would require taxi drivers to pay a monthly fee to operate, as drivers in New York and Boston do. Because of the legislation, taxi drivers went on strike earlier this week.

The indictment unsealed in D.C. federal court says Ted G. Loza, 44, took bribes from an unidentified person in the taxicab industry. According to court papers, that person provided a "stream of things of value," including "cash, the use of vehicles and trips." Loza is charged with two counts of bribery.

In exchange, Loza agreed to help promote a limit on the number of D.C. taxicab licenses, the indictment says.

Graham is chairman of the Committee on Public Works and Transportation with oversight of the D.C. Taxicab Commission.

Loza's attorney, Pleasant S. Brodnax III, said Loza is not guilty of the charges and that the indictment is "the government's version of the facts." Jessica Gresko (AP)

Dangerous Ground

Redskins try to find a way to get running game going vs. Lions

REDSKINS | Rarely are stats so misleading.

On paper, the Redskins' offense looks decent. It's getting 317 yards per game, quarterback Jason Campbell is completing nearly 69 percent of his passes, and tailback Clinton Portis appears to be on his way to another 1,000-yard season.

No one would guess all that after watching last week's game.

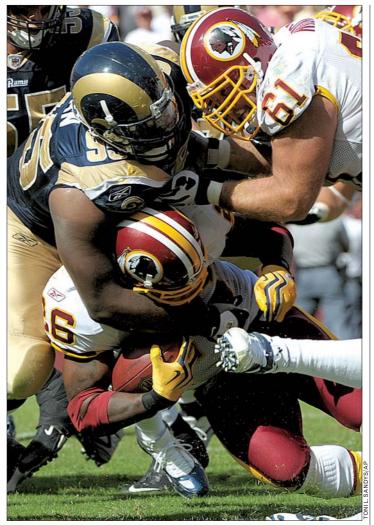

Washington's 9-7 win over the Rams drew more ire from fans and talking heads than its season-opening loss in New York. While the team moved the ball effectively against St. Louis, it failed to score a touchdown in five red zone possessions or complete a signature play.

While quarterback Jason Campbell said teams have been taking away No. 1 receiver Santana Moss in the first two games, he also noted that the Rams made a point of lining up to stop the run last week, forcing Washington to pass earlier than it would like.

The Redskins have traditionally opened up the pass by running over teams with their ground game. Even after coach Jim Zorn instituted the West Coast offense last season, Por-Redskins running back Clinton Portis is driven to the ground against the Rams on Sunday. Washington's running game has failed to get on track to start the season.

DECEPTIVE STATS

TDs in last week's win, despite five red zone possessions.

UNDER PRESSURE

JIM ZORN was asked this week - on his own radio show, no less - whether a loss at Detroit on Sunday could cost him his job. And that's coming off a win. Redskins players know the booing is only going to get louder if they are the ones to end Detroit's 19-game winless steak. "It's only a matter of time," Portis said. "We just hope it isn't Sunday." E.B.

tis was still the Redskins' biggest weapon, scoring nine of their 27 touchdowns in 2008.

But the Redskins have run the ball with few significant results so far this season. In fact, if you take away Portis' 34-yard run in the opener, the Washington is averaging 3.3 yards per carry.

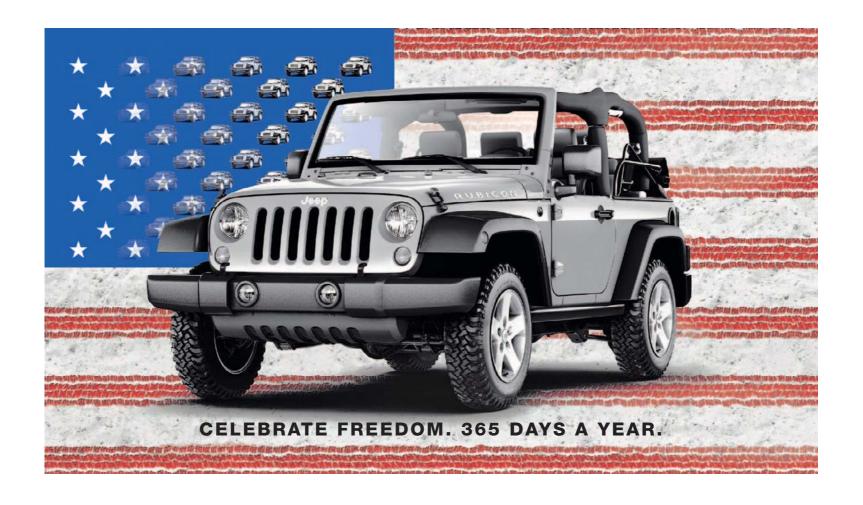

The running game faces even more challenges this week - not from Detroit's defense necessarily.

Veteran guard Randy Thomas was lost for the year with a torn triceps, meaning either much-greener Chad Rinehart or Will Montgomery will replace him in the starting lineup. Washington's new-look line will likely be blocking for a new runner, too, as the Redskins re-signed Anthony Aldridge, presumably to add big-play speed to a backfield that's filled with rugged runners.

"Some teams make it look easy," Portis said. "Right now, we're not playing the way we think we're capable of playing." ERIC BRANDNER

ECONOMY A Lion Shame The Detroit Lions failed to sell enough tickets for Sunday's game against the Washington Redskins, which will result in a TV blackout in some local markets. Last week, facing a similar problem, the Lions were able to sell 1,700 tickets for the home game against Minnesota. No such luck this time. With an anemic Redskins offense coming to town, who can blame the citizens of Detroit for saving their hard-earned cash. The Lions have lost 19 games in a row, matching the second-longest skid in NFL history. (AP)

THE REDSKINS WILL WIN IF ...

Clinton Portis doesn't throw a pass inside the 10-yard line.

The halfback option on third down against the Rams was a sign of desperation and a vote of no-confidence in quarterback Jason Campbell. It was the second-straight game coach Jim Zorn turned to a trick play for a score. After the latest failed spectacularly, the Redskins, and Campbell, in particular, need to show they can crack the end zone.

DeAngelo Hall does his best Snuggie impersonation. Let's face it: Blankets have gone out of style, and Snuggies are one-size-fits-all. That last fact is especially vital for Hall as he tries to cover the Lions' Calvin Johnson, a big and dangerous target for QB Matthew Stafford. Johnson is Detroit's biggest weapon, and it will be up to Hall to prove he is a true shutdown cornerback.

The fans are booing loudly during the game. Washington's fans' reaction last week led to a flap over rookie ROBERT HENSON'S talked-to-death tweet. Of course, this week the Redskins are in Detroit. And if the fans are throwing a fit, it means Zorn's offense is finally clicking. Considering some of the doomsday scenarios heard this week, the booing

3 UP 3 DOWN

How the Redskins could win - or lose - this week would be music to Zorn's ears.

THE REDSKINS WILL LOSE IF ...

The bulk of the post-game analysis is focused on Chad

Rinehart. The second-year offensive lineman is slated to make the first start of his career after Randy Thomas tore his triceps and was lost for the season. A weak link at right guard could be enough to stall any running attempts and leave Campbell vulnerable to sacks. That could lead to mistakes, which could keep the Lions in the game long enough to perhaps steal a win.

Carlos Rogers drops two potential interceptions. The cornerback, fairly or not, is known for letting golden opportunities slip through his fingers — literally. He claims to have lost a ball in the sun last Sunday against the Rams. Washington is not in a position to be letting a mistake-prone rookie quarterback off the hook, and the defense may need to score to ensure a victory. Failing to capitalize early may haunt the Redskins late.

If the Schwartz is with the Lions. Given the disparity in talent, the Redskins should win this game handily unless an otherworldly power intervenes. Considering the Force didn't seem so strong in the new "Star Wars" trilogy, and given that the Lions coach is Georgetown alum Jim Schwartz, Detroit may have better luck turning to YOGURT. who preached the powers of the Schwartz in "Spaceballs," instead of Yoda.

Defense Letting Terrapins Down

New blitzing scheme has yet to yield many big plays this season

TERPS FOOTBALL | On paper, it was a positive play. Demetrius Hartfield burst through the line and sacked the Middle Tennessee State quarterback for a 10-yard loss on a critical third-down in the fourth quarter.

But Terrapins coach Ralph Friedgen saw it as a missed opportunity. The quarterback had left the ball exposed. But instead of going for the strip, the freshman linebacker went straight for the body.

A fumble would have given Maryland a potentially gamechanging play in what became an unsightly upset loss. "If we're going to play that type of defense," Friedgen said, "when we get a chance, we've got to make a play."

Friedgen was describing the blitzing, attacking scheme of new defensive coordinator Don Brown, whose defense confounded foes while he was head coach at Massachusetts. It has not been as successful so far in Maryland, which faces Rutgers (2-1) on Saturday.

"As far as guys blitzing and being fast, playing fast, we're slowly starting to get a better grip on how to do that," said senior cornerback Anthony Wiseman. "It's just a matter of taking the next step." derek turner

TERPS FOOTBALL | BY MATT SWENSON

Friedgen Critics Should Chill Out

RALPH FRIEDGEN is not the only coach in this area feeling the heat. He is, however, the only one with a track record of winning.

It's important to keep this in mind during what appears to be a dreadful season for the University of Maryland. The Terrapins (1-2) are lucky to have a win this season despite facing James Madison and Middle Tennessee State in consecutive weeks.

A three- or four-win year is not out of the question, leaving many to already debate whether Friedgen should be asked to return for a 10th season. Such talk means it's time to call in the perspective police.

The almost-larger-than-life Terps coach entered the season with a 64-32 record.

Friedgen's enjoyed five winning seasons, and even if his biggest success came with Ron Vanderlinden's recruits, there's no doubt he got more out of those players than his predecessor would have. Eight wins per season seems about right for mediocre Maryland.

That doesn't excuse this terrible season. It does, however, suggest Friedgen has earned the right to see whether he can avoid two such vears in a row.

Gretzky Steps Down As Coach of Coyotes

NHL | Wayne Gretzky has resigned as coach of the Phoenix Coyotes.

Gretzky's departure had been rumored as the bankruptcy court battle between Canadian billionaire Jim Balsillie and the NHL over the sale of the financially troubled team dragged on.

Gretzky, who is due to make $8.5 million this season, coached the Coyotes from 2005 to 2009, finishing with a 143-161-24 record, and the team missed the playoffs all four seasons.

Gretzky, 48, also owns a small piece of the franchise.

The Coyotes had no immediate

Neighborly Networking

Web sites help foster friendship and spread information among busy condo owners

Homeowners, never underestimate the value of being in the virtual loop. That's the lesson learned this summer by residents of the Rhapsody, a 162-unit condo building at Vermont and Florida avenues NW.

When a small fire suddenly sparked in one wing of the highrise, it set off the sprinkler system, which, in turn, caused damage in many units. Unlucky residents in that part of the building might not normally have had much interaction with their neighbors at that point, but the community's Yahoo listserv came to the rescue.

Almost instantly, messages of | Frank Borges LLosa works on his computer in the Clarendon IO2I condo building. The condo's residents maintain a Yahoo group.

good tidings flooded the listserv as neighbors offered help — and their homes — to those in need.

"It really helped create a sense of community, and it has sort of drawn us together," says the listserv's moderator Mike Dembski, 54, an information technology professional.

Since Dembski founded the Rhapsody's listserv in April 2007, it has grown to include more than 150 members, with monthly message counts ranging from a couple dozen to well more than 100. Dembski describes the online group as a no-frills way for neighbors to communicate - one in which the usefulness of the medium indubitably ebbs and flows over time. But if the fire incident taught the condo owners anything, it's that when emergency strikes, having an online network in place is essential.

In some condo communities these days, neighbors are just as likely to rub shoulders virtually as in the hallway. Chalk it up to long workdays and increasingly mobile and plugged-in residents.

"We're a large building — 419 units - and a lot of owners don't live on-site," explains Melissa Rothe, general manager of Clarendon 1021 in Arlington. "So, even though we do the typical elevator fliers about things, the Web helps keep our owners who don't necessarily live here — or people who are traveling - informed about what's going on. Everyone here has a BlackBerry or iPhone." Clarendon 1021 features a password-protected Web site for residents that showcases upcoming events and security alerts, an official listserv - and an unofficial Yahoo group discussion board - and a Facebook group for publicizing social gatherings.

Though Rothe and the condo board coordinate much of the online community, resident and Realtor Frank Borges LLosa (Franklyrealty.com) says the primary way Clarendon 1021 owners connect is via a private Yahoo group, which he estimates counts around 50 percent of the building as members.

"Half of it is stuff they could answer with a quick question to the management office, but they'd rather ask their neighbors," says LLosa, 35. "Instead of being this sole person who pops his head into the management office, [each resident is] building relationships."

Some condo owners take the initiative to use online tools such as blogs to enhance their community.

That critical mass can act as an enhancement or a detriment to condo life, depending on the topic and tone of the discussion. Like in any neighborhood, squabbles can - and will - happen.

Log Into the Loop

Matthew Humphrey, founder of the homeowner association management Web site HOAleader. com, says online chatter can make a condo association twist from civil to ugly as quickly as you can click the send button. "Conflict happens between neighbors, online or offline," he says. "But everything happens faster and more publicly online."

Dembski can vouch for that notion. In the first several months of the Rhapsody's listserv, members remained anonymous. But before long, a couple cranky listserv trolls "took it upon themselves to lambaste people," Dembski says. Eventually, he decided to hit refresh. Now the listsery allows only residents to join using an owner ID, a move that put a halt to the negative tone.

On the flip side, discussing a policy issue online can be a more thoughtful way to hash out the many sides to a debate. About a year ago, the condo board at Clarendon 1021 considered adding more speed bumps to the parking lot, a topic that led to much heated debate on the listsery. Opinionated online debaters eventually became formal members of a real, live committee to determine the building's policy.

The Web helps keep our owners who don't necessarily live here ... informed about what's going on."

-MELISSA ROTHE, GENERAL MANAGER OF CLARENDON 1021

"The board listens to the message board unofficially," Dembski explains. "It allows people to feel like things aren't being crammed down their throats."

Just as listsery topics occasionally edge onto board meeting agendas, some condo owners take the initiative to use online tools to enhance their community. A few years ago, Lee Hernly, 45, a resident of Alexandria's Carlyle Towers, transformed his post as a community affairs committee member — which involved writing a monthly article for the newsletter — into that of resident blogger.

The fast-evolving neighborhood of Carlyle, a pocket of booming construction just west of Old Town Alexandria, warranted more than a single article once a month, Hernly says. So, the professional computer programmer launched Carlyle Community News (Carlyle community.org), a blog for residents of Carlyle Towers and the neighboring condo and apartment buildings. Readership has swelled to about 15,000 page views per month, with blog posts zooming in on hyper-local topics such as street closures, overnight flooding and new businesses.

Discussing a policy issue online can be a more thoughtful way to hash out the many sides to a debate.

Carlyle Towers also has a Facebook group where happy hours are planned, an effort spearheaded by resident Shelu Patel, 30, who works in project management. She set up the online group in hopes of meeting more of her neighbors from the sprawling complex.

"I have friends who never had Facebook profiles but got on Facebook just because we had this page," Patel says.

So, what's the catch? Most online interaction includes just a self-selected subset of the condo community who have chosen to connect virtually.

"You think everyone is participating, and you get this wonderful warm feeling about the inclusiveness of it all — but often it's an illusion," Humphrey says. "Let's face it: Most large condos and communities will have groups within them that will be underrepresented or underserved by a social network. Once you get lulled into believing the social network is a ... full representation of the entire community, you've developed a blind spot." KATIE KNOROVSKY

expert opinion

THINK YOUR HOME is less polluted than a city street?

Think again. According to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Americans spend, on average, about 90 percent or more of their time indoors, where levels of pollutants may be two to five times — and occasionally even more than 100 times — higher than outdoor levels.

Grossed out yet? You're not alone. In June, Acting Surgeon General Steven K. Galson issued "The Surgeon General's Call to Action to Promote Healthy Homes," hoping to start a dialogue about how our homes can affect our well-being.

Expect Glenn Fellman to participate in that discussion. As the executive director of the Rockville-based Indoor Air Quality Association (Iaqa.org) and Indoor Environmental Standards Organization (Indoorstandards.org), Fellman has 20 years of experience addressing indoor environmental concerns. He knows all about the allergens, pollutants and other things that can make your nose itch, eyes water and head hurt. Luckily, he also knows how to keep them out of your house.

We asked Fellman for tips on how to breathe easier at home, and then we found products to help you enjoy the great indoors even more.

Practice Good Housekeeping

Fellman says this means washing sheets and towels once a week, dusting with a damp cloth or other material that collects — not disperses — debris and using sanitizers to kill germs in kitchens and bathrooms. And, ideally, you should pull out the (high-efficiency, please) vacuum twice a week. That chore has become more stylish, thanks to the new ELECTROLUX VERSATILITY VACUUM (Electroluxusa.com, $300), which boasts an anti-odor HEPA (high-efficiency particulate air) filtration system and comes in shades such as amethyst and lime green. Find it at retailers such as WAL-MART (Walmart.com), BEST BUY (Bestbuy.com) and LOWE'S (Lowes.com).

Embrace Product Placement
Watch where you store your cleaning products, even ones labeled "green." The best place to keep them: a well-ventilated area as far from living spaces as possible. But in a condo, finding a spot like that can be tough. "If you're limited on space and they have to go under the sink or a counter, that's fine," says Fellman. "But don't put them in the air-conditioning closet. All the air you breathe goes through that closet."

Dry Off "Moisture has been shown to be a major contributor to asthma and allergies, mostly because of the mold growth it promotes," Fellman says. "Leaks should be repaired immediately, and moisture should be removed through dehumidification or professional drying services in cases of flooding." HAIER'S (Haieramerica.com) line of FREE-

STANDING DEHUMIDIFIERS ($159 to $219) includes models that are Energy

Star-qualified and that help to reduce dust mites and moisture. You can pick up one up at TARGET (Target.com).

Keep an Eye on Your Neighbors

"For those living in multi-unit buildings like condos and townhouses, your neighbors' activities can have a big impact on your environment," Fellman says. A damp, moldy basement adjacent to your home, for example, could lead to odors or moisture intrusion into your property. And be on the lookout for crawling critters. "If your neighbors have cockroaches, bed bugs or ants, chances are you will, too," Fellman says. "The best solution is an integrated pest-management plan that is maintained by property management or your homeowners group."

Give Your HVAC System Some TLC

"The heating, ventilating and air-conditioning [HVAC] systems are like the heart and circulatory systems of your home," Fellman says. "When they become clogged with dust or mold, they not only cease to function effectively, but they may also distribute pollutants indoors." In addition to getting your system serviced regularly, Fellman recommends changing HVAC filters monthly and using high-efficiency filters, "not the cheap, disposable kind sometimes found at supermarkets or dollar stores." The FILTRETE ADVANCED ALLERGEN REDUCTION FILTER (Filtrete.com, $21) from 3M claims to capture 90 percent of large airborne particles — think pet dander, mold spores, dust mites — and microscopic particles such as smoke, smog and particles that can carry viruses. Clear the Air "The filters in your HVAC system are designed to keep the system clean, not to clean the air in your home," says Fellman. If you think your home requires air cleaning, Fellman recommends investing in an air cleaner. But do your homework before you buy. "Air cleaners that produce ozone, even as a by-product, should be avoided," he says. "Look for an air cleaner that incorporates a HEPA filter to remove fine particulates from the air. And make sure the air cleaner you select is sized appropriately for the area you place it." QAIR'S HEALTHPRO PLUS ROOM AIR PURIFIER (Igair.com, $939) has received top reviews from publications such as Wired magazine and Consumers Digest for its ability to eliminate everything from pollen to odor-causing volatile organic compounds (VOCs) from the air. As a preferred dealer, BROTHERS SEW & VAC (Brothersewvac.com; locations in Bethesda, Rockville/Kensington, Silver Spring and D.C.) always has the product in stock and offers free demos to customers.

Go Au Naturel For removing odors from a room, Fellman typically eschews any cover-up. "The best solution is to find the source of the odor and remove it," he says. "If that is not possible, there are many products on the market to mask odors, from aerosol sprays to scented candles to plug-ins. But all of those products add chemicals, particulate and odors to the air, and could make someone with asthma or allergies even sicker. Candles send a lot of soot into the air, so I virtually never recommend them." The best bet, Fellman says, is to stay natural with fresh flowers such as stargazer lilies, or to use potpourri. Make sure the new flora doesn't trigger a sneezefest, though. "If a person has allergies, flowers might not help much," Fellman says. Pick up a bouquet at your local farmers market or neighborhood flower stall, or check out the selection of potted plants at THE GARDEN DISTRICT (Gardendistrict-dc.com; 202-

Art of Decorating

A consultant gives tips on how to adorn walls with original, eye-catching works

When it comes to decorating, one of the most challenging tasks is figuring out what to do with a bare wall.

Allison Marvin has made a

COLUMBIA HEIGHTS

career out of helping people do just that. She is the founder of Sightline (Sightline.biz), an art consulting business started in 2004. Marvin works with clients across the country, helping them navigate the art world and offering guidance on buying works for their homes and offices. She also leads tours of art spaces and introduces beginning and seasoned collectors to galleries and dealers.

Marvin is aware that not everyone is interested in being a serious art collector. Some folks simply want to fill their empty walls. For those with neither the time, the budget nor the inclination to start a collection, she still recommends buying something original, which, she says, isn't as difficult to find or as cost-prohibitive as you

"Student work is going to be the least expensive," she advises. "Check with local universities to see if they have open studio days. You can get something original, and you're supporting a young artist, which is a nice thing." Growing up in an artistic family (her mother was an art writer, her father a painter), Marvin, 37, says she always knew she wanted to work in the art world. After studying art in college, she attended law school and then practiced at a D.C. firm, gaining expertise in intellectual property, contracts and licensing. Four and a half years later, she left the firm to simultaneously start Sightline and her own law practice, focusing on art-related law. Today, she runs both businesses out of her Chevy Chase home, where she lives with her husband, a 1-year-old son, and a growing collection of national and international paintings and photographs.

Marvin recently spoke to us about collecting, hanging and framing art, and where to find it in the first place.

What advice would you give someone looking for art for his or her home?

I would encourage people to take their time. If that means allowing the time to budget and save the money to put towards a piece, then do it.

I also suggest they resist purchasing several smaller, lowervalue pieces and wait for one larger piece when they can afford it, and when they find a piece that really sings to them. If a smaller piece is less expensive but it's not something that's grabbing you, exercise patience. Typically, you want to go with the big pieces that really stand out. It's hard to resist buying, but while you continue to look, you're learning about yourself.

Buying artwork shouldn't be about filling a certain space on a wall or about the price. When you find the right piece, it should provoke a guttural response.

How do you figure out your personal taste in art?

Go look at a lot of art. Go to museums. Walk through galleries. Pay attention to your reactions. Have a conversation with yourself about what you like and why, and what you don't like and why. It's all about finding artwork that challenges you, moves you or reflects your sensibilities.

* Certain restrictions apply. See sales manager for details.

What would you suggest to someone on a limited budget?

Ask yourself: What are visual things around you that appeal to you? What moves you? Do you have favorite books, magazines, objects?

Pick a predominant wall in your house and create a display of a personalized collection of objects and images, salon-style [different sizes and shapes hung in a grouped arrangement]. If you have favorite magazines and books, pull the pages out. Hang a postcard that someone sent you. Include programs or other takeaways from art shows you particularly liked. I would do that rather than pay $250 for a framed poster from a chain store.

Is there a general guideline for hanging art?

Most people make the mistake of hanging art too high. Art is supposed to be eye level, but it shouldn't be eye level to a guy who is 6-foot-3. If you hang artwork lower, you bring it into the room, make it much more part of the environment, and you can look at it better.

Rule of thumb: Artwork should hang so that its center is 60 inches from the ground. But I often hang my own art so that the center is a bit lower, about 56 to 58 inches from the ground.

What do you need to know about choosing a frame?

Let the artwork be your guide and your only focus. The frame should respect and reflect the art, not fight it. A good framer will show you your options and tell you what he or she thinks looks best. Rule of thumb: Simple is better.

When selecting materials, it's best to use UV-protective glass, especially if the artwork is going to be exposed to sunlight; you want to avoid hanging art in a spot that gets direct sun. For matting, use archival materials — like paper, tape and glue — so the artwork doesn't get damaged over the years. Custom framing can get expensive, but it's the best route for any artwork you invest in; it will look the best and preserve the work the best.

Where can people find nice frames in stores?

Ikea has good-looking, clean and contemporary white frames. And you can usually find simple, affordable frames at your local hardware store, like Strosniders in Bethesda [301-654-5688, Strosniders.com]. You won't get the UV protection or archival materials, but you'll get something that's a decent temporary solution.

What is the most common mistake people make when buying art?

Mistakes happen when people don't educate themselves about where to look for quality art. There's a road map, and it's easy to follow: Talk to a few people in the know, like a gallery owner, a collector or a consultant, and you'll be off and running TERRI SAPIENZA (THE WASHINGTON POST)

CHEAT SHEET

Allison Marvin recommends some of her favorite art-related places in Washington and on the Web:

GALLERIES

- IRVINE CONTEMPORARY (141214th St. NW; 202-332-8767, Irvinecontemporary. com). "This gallery often collaborates with its artists on cool projects, such as video releases, sound performances and street-art parties. And it produces catalogs with its shows to educate people about types of art that don't get written about much by the art critics, such as street art."
- CONNER CONTEMPORARY (1358-60 Florida Ave. NE; 202-588-8750, Connercontemporary.com). "They choose graduating art students around the country to participate in group shows, so price points will be a little lower at these shows."
- TRANSFORMER GALLERY (1404 P St. NW; 202-483-1102, Transformergallery. org). This is "the leading nonprofit art space in D.C.," Marvin says. It holds an annual auction with works from local artists. Starting bids are much lower than they would be in a gallery, she says.
- "The 14th Street, Logan Circle area is the most concentrated area of good contemporary art galleries in the city." Places to look include G FINE ART (Gfineartdc.com), HEMPHILL (Hemphillfinearts.com) and CURATOR'S OFFICE (Curatorsoffice.com).

FRAME SHOPS

FRAMESMITH D.C. (1352 Q St. NW; 202-518-2500). "It's a small enterprise, so things can take a little longer, but it's worth the wait," Marvin says. "It's a go-to frame shop for some of the galleries in the area."

- BETHESDA CUSTOM FRAMING (7910 Old Georgetown Road, Bethesda; 301-654-1118). "It doesn't look like much from the outside, but they are really good and reasonably priced."
- ARCHIVAL ART SERVICES (1515 14th St. NW, Suite 301; 202-462-1111, Archivalartservices.com). "The Cadillac version," Marvin says of this frame shop, which helps museums with exhibits. Services are top-notch, but so are the prices.

WEB RESOURCES

■ FINE ART ADOPTION NETWORK

(Fineartadoption.net). No money is exchanged for art on this site. Users peruse artwork and contact artists directly. Based on the correspondence, the artist decides whether to send the work for free. "It's done to encourage collection and stewardship," Marvin says.

■ ARTNET (Artnet.com). Galleries from around the world put their inventory on this site, which is a major resource for people looking to collect art, Marvin says. In addition, the site's user-friendly auction system includes estimates of each work's value.

■ THE PINK LINE PROJECT

(Pinklineproject.com). Click on any day of the calendar and get a listing of art events in the D.C. area. "It's a onestop shop for all things art in the city," Marvin says.

Jodi Arnold

CLOTHING DESIGNER, PRIESTESS OF PRINTS

When she was growing up in Birmingham, Ala., Jodi Arnold loved sewing her own clothes even if that meant she stood out in the crowd at school. Now, as the designer for womenswear line MINT Jodi Arnold, she specializes in similarly statement-making print dresses, shapely sweaters and embellished tops. She'll be in town today from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. at a trunk show of her fall and holiday line at the Georgetown boutique Wink (3109 M St. NW; 202-338-9465).

What kind of women wear MINT?

I think they're most likely in a creative field. They're thoughtful and want to hear what the story is behind a product, what gives it soul.

How do you give clothing soul?

I love the craft of making clothes | For fall and winter, I was feeling more than just the fashion. I'm fascinated by how to do new embroidery or how to make a dart a different way. Every season we do pieces with handcrafted details. That's more interesting to people than what they're wearing on "Gossip Girl."

Do you design differently because you know how to sew?

I think it's an advantage. You can sketch anything, but if you don't know how to make it, you're at a loss. I know how a seam is going to come out or how fabrics sag if you sew them a certain way.

Is there anything besides clothes you'd like to design?

I'd love to do shoes, but they can be hard to get produced.

What inspired you this season?

constrained by trends, so I went about things spontaneously. I tried to let things flow, like jazz.

What does this mean we'll see in your collection?

We did a dress with embellishments based on 1800s beadwork,

"It's nice to be in a print when other people are dressed in black. It gives you a good feeling."

and a print that was inspired by a Cy Twombly painting with teals, pinks and yellows.

Is it hard to wear a colorful print?

It's about confidence. It's nice to be in a print when other people are dressed in black. You know that you're wearing something special, and it gives you a good feeling.

Any current fashion trends you think we'll live to regret?

Well, we're offering leather leggings, and we might regret that. I don't think I'll be wearing them.

So, what should women invest in, clothes-wise, this season?

I'd love to see more people in prints, particularly these digital prints we've been seeing a lot of.

What's your personal style?

I just turned 43, so I'm changing what I like to wear. I try to find a balance between things that aren't too short but that are still versatile and interesting.

What do you do when you aren't designing clothes?

I have two cocker spaniels, so I play with them a lot. And I'm into yoga. Other than that, I work! JENNIFER BARGER (EXPRESS)

YEARS SPENT TRAWLING flea markets across China inspired the design duo behind hip Brit line Wu & Wu - illustrator Fiona Hewitt and "Asian Kitschology" expert Andy Tainton — to meld vintage Asian imagery with modern-day items. The result: cheeky-cool pouches($18) and coin purses ($10) with Far Eastern flair, now stocked at Art With Flowers (Tysons Galleria, McLean; 703-903-6837). They're perfect for stashing toiletries, jewelry or a collection of soy sauce packets.

ANSWERS FROM THE SHOE BLOGGER

I'm a 20-something Brooklyn girl in search of the perfect leather boot. I need something that will work from fall to spring, that I can wear uptown to work, downtown to play, that can stand up to miles of walking around without killing my feet. I'm back on my feet after a layoff, so I'd like to celebrate with an appropriately practical, classic and useful purchase. - SHANNA

Manolo says, this heartfelt plea poses the serious philosophical question: Is there such the thing as the perfect boot? Can one boot meet all of our many and varied boot-wearing needs?

The Manolo must answer, no, there is no such thing as the platonic, perfect-for-the-every-occasion boot. This is why God invented the shoe closet, so that we may store our perfect-for-walking-around-Manhattan boots next to our perfect-for-working-uptown boots, while we are wearing our perfect-fordowntown-playing boots.

Happily, although ultimate perfection may be beyond the reach of mortals, there are still good, general purpose boots that will satisfy most of your day-to-day needs. Here is the Aden from Delman ($479, Zappos.com), one such low-heel, knee-high classic that will serve many of your needs.

DIY DECORATING PROJECTS can furnish — and personalize — your place on the cheap. Still, finding the time (and vision) to dream up ReadyMade Mag-ish decor can be difficult. Wary Meyers' "Tossed & Found" ($28, Stewart, Tabori & Chang) compiles nearly 50 furniture ideas using run-of-the-mill castoffs (broken chairs, old electronics, foam pool noodles) with results trending more funky than junky. A fave: a tree slice (shown), attached to a yard sale base to create a hip end table.

Hoppy Hour Special

For years, wine was the quaff of choice at cheese tastings and fancy dinner parties, while beer was relegated to tailgate parties and keggers. But peer beyond the foam, and you'll see that suds — especially craft domestic varieties such as IPAS or stouts and haute Belgian imports — can launch swanky soirées, from tastings that evoke Napa to food-and-bev combos to rival feasts at Michelin three-star spots.

▶ "Along the line, beer became sexy. People are starting to understand that beer can be trendy, hip and cool like cocktails," says Christina Perozzi, a Los Angeles-based beer consultant and co-author with Hallie Beaune of "The Naked Pint" ($19.95. Perigree). "It takes one pairing to go from buffalo wings and Coors, to goat cheese salad and artisan raspberry beer."

Beer ranks as the world's third-most popular beverage, behind water and tea, which don't make for the liveliest of fêtes. It's no wonder that brewskis have a rep for fueling drunken frat bashes. But if you go beyond the cases of Pabst Blue Ribbon (or Heineken kegs), you'll find buzzy ways to throw a beer bash.

Even kegs have grown up. "If you can get a little keg from your local brewery, you'll be king of the party," says Beaune. "If it's a good beer, it won't seem like a kegger. Serve nice food and great cheese. That and the quality of the beer will erase those bad kegger memories."

Beaune recommends tapping a crowd-pleasing pale ale or porter, available at liquor stores such as Wagner's (1717 Wisconsin Ave. NW; 202-232-1900) or Arlington Market (144 N. Stuart St., Arlington; 703-351-6121). If guests don't gulp the whole thing in one night,

"Along the line, beer became sexy. People are starting to understand hat beer can be trendy, hip and coolable like cocktails."

keep the keg cold for a party later in the week or use it to bake beer loaves or even whip up a dessert, such as Oatmeal Stout Panna Cotta, a recipe from "The Naked Pint."

If you take the bottled route, offer guests a tasting lineup, which might even turn them on to a new favorite quaff. "You never know what you don't know about beer until someone else shows the variety out there. You'll spend all your time figuring out the difference between Bud and Bud Light," says Andy Anderson, president of Brewers United for Real Potables (BURP), a local association of home brewers (Burp.org). At BURP's monthly meetings, beers that members sample might be all of one type (Oktoberfest) or be paired with a single food (chili, cheese).

When deciding what to pour, you could follow the lead of Restaurant 3 (2950 Clarendon Blvd., Arlington; 703-524-4440), where the extensive brew list is organized by region, with beers grouped from light to heavy. "Tasting by region gives a glimpse of an area's culture," says co-owner Jonathan Williams, who's in the process of expanding his restaurant's list to more than 100 bottles. "IPAs — which came about as explorers were traveling to distant lands — go with spicy Indian food. Oktoberfest beers

So Long, Pong There's nothing wrong with a game of flip cup, but when you're aiming for a party that's more House Beautiful than "Animal House," keep your entertainment classy — and less likely to result in an F. Scott Fitzgeraldian hangover. Rustico's Greg Engert suggests playing Guess That Beer. "Take paper and wrap a good portion of the glass so that people can't see the beer. Then make them guess what they're tasting," he says. Mix craft beers with cheap ones (hi, High Life) to make it tricky. Or pick up Brew-Opoly ($23, Amazon), a board game that riffs on Monopoly using microbrews as properties and game pieces such as bottle caps and pretzels.

taste great with brats and pretzels."

Greg Engert, beer director of Rustico (827 Slaters Lane, Alexandria; 703-224-5051) and Birch and Barley (opening next month at 1337 14th St. NW), organizes his list into seven major flavors: crisp, hoppy, malty, roasty, smoky, fruity/spicy and tart/funky. "So many styles of beers are tweeners, but you can get people to taste the flavor profile and understand the aromas of what they're drinking."

If you host a tasting bash, kick things off with the brewed equivalent of an aperitif. "If you start off with Bière de Champagne [a beer subjected to the same conditioning as champagne], you immediately blow people's minds and get them on board for the rest of the party," Beaune says.

From there, proceed from pale to dark. "I'd start with a pilsner to present the light, bready maltiness," says Randy Mosher, author of "Tasting Beer" ($17, Storey Publishing). "A well-brewed pilsner is a revelation to many. They're used to stale European versions. When they get a good fresh one in front of them, it's like peeling back a layer of grime in floor-cleaning commercials."

Williams recommends trying a light ale, such as Kolsch, at the outset, ending with heavier beers such as porters or Belgian beers.

When it comes to the actual presentation, beer, like wine, merits special glassware. But there's no need to invest in new steins: Mosher recommends wine glasses. "They have a stem you can hold, so you're not warming beer with your hands. And it looks more elegant. Wine glasses are rounded and taper in toward the top. When you fill it one-third full, you create head space, trapping the aroma and helping when you're trying to sort out flavors and smells." If you pour several beers, offer a bucket where guests can dump anything they don't like.

"Setting up a beer-tasting can be as simple or complex as a wine-tasting," says Williams. "There's no reason to be intimidated, because, in the end, it's just beer." ERIN HARTIGAN

A structured beer-tasting, like this one recommended by Greg Engert, beer director of Rustico and the forthcoming Birch and Barley, means you'll sip from light to dark to effervescent.

PILSNER URQUELL

Mildly hoppy, crystal clear and easy to drink, this old Czech standard could also power a whole party or taste refreshing with goat cheeses. shellfish dishes or even something gamey such as venison.

DOGFISH HEAD 90-MINUTE IMPERIAL IPA

Like a hops punch to the face, this highly alcoholic, highly flavored brew tends to be a love it or hate it choice. Pour it with a spicy, bold dish such as jambalaya.

FULLER'S EXTRA SPECIAL BITTER

Mineraly, light and sort of toasty, this English ale goes down easy. Try it with grilled meats or sausages or even smoked salmon, which the bitter cuts through deliciously.

STONE SMOKED PORTER

Like velvet in a glass, this dark, rich drink boasts mild hoppiness and a nice, smoky flavor. Treat this like a dessert, or serve it with a fruit dessert such as pineapple upside-down cake.

LEFFE BLONDE

Clean, clear, creamy and spicy (Is that coriander we taste?), this Belgian favorite could also work as a terrific apéritif. Citrusy notes mean it'd go swell with fish dishes or mussels and frites.

LINDEMAN'S FRAMBOISE LAMBIC

A sour, fruity Belgian ale marries tartness and sweetness in an unusual, bubbly beer. Works well solo or with a rich. unctuous dessert such as a blueberry creme brulée.

Bye, Beer Nuts

While the star of any beer bash is, well, brews, food matters, too. Chips and wings might have worked in college, but your grown-up palate knows better. "People need to erase pretty bad memories about keg stands," Hallie Beaune says. "Beer's just as beautiful with food as any winepairing dinner." Here are intoxicating ways to combine brews and nibbles:

If you used to serve cubes of cheese: Try Münster paired with Dogfish Head Indian Brown Ale. You can also hit the cheese counter at Whole Foods or a specialty store such asLaFromagerie (1222KingSt., Alexandria; 703-879-2467) for suggestions.

If you used to put out a bag of Oreos: Pair dark chocolate cake with a fruit-based Lambic.

If you used to order pizza: Upgrade to a full dinner matching food to brews. "People cook seasonally with farmers market ingredients," says beer consultant Christina Perozzi. "Use what's available at the farmers market and serve it with local beers. That's current to how people are eating." Autumn ales pair well with the greens and late-harvest produce of early fall.

If you used to close the evening out with shots: Pour the beer equivalent of dessert wine, say, a chocolatey stout. Whether you serve it with a brownie or on its own, it'll amount to a yummy ending. "Beer's flavor, carbonation and bitterness deal with sweet and fat really well," says Randy Mosher, author of "Tasting Beer."

The Devil Returns Prada

Sassy sales associate Freeman Hall spills the secrets of the store

A haute handbag salesman at a Big Fancy department store might sound like the most glamorous way to work in retail. Think again.
In his new book, "Retail Hell" ($23, Adams), Gucci hawker-turned-author Freeman
Hall shares hilarious tales of his 15-year servitude as a sales guy, from crazy customers to the cloyingly cheerful store culture.

Your book is laugh-out-loud funny. Did you purposely want it to have a humorous tone?

One of the things I did not want to do was sound angry or critical of stores and customers. I just wanted to share the absurdity and chaos of retail.

Some tales were shocking, like people who return things bought years ago.

Customers would bring back bags that looked like they'd been attacked by a mountain lion or were a toxic waste dump inside. The store had a lenient return policy, and people took advantage of it. We'd try to fight — it wasn't just principle; we'd lose the commission of the original sale.

Your book proves that there are a lot of crazy shoppers out there.

Like the woman who came up to every one of the sales staff to ask if we could use our employee discount to buy her things. She promised to meet us in the parking lot and give us $10 for our trouble.

Did you learn any shopping tricks?

Now is a great time to buy a designer handbag, because this fall, most designers have lowered prices by 10 percent. Forget your house payment — that $4,000 Gucci bag is now only $3,600!

What about for those on a budget?

For a less expensive option, I also love the designer bridge lines — Marc by Marc Jacobs, See by Chloe, Michael by Michael Kors. At $300 to $500, they're more affordable, but they still have a high-end designer look.

You've traded sales for full-time writing. What's next for you?

Hopefully, many more books. I have a lot more horror stories to tell! Betsy Lowther (Express)

IT'S ALL UP IN THE AIR: "Fame" depicts the cutthroat world of a performing arts high school where talented teenagers work to make their uncertain futures brighter.

Fame

A reinvention of the '80s favorite puts a clean spin on the original but manages to keep the spirit alive

Flashbacks

1980 high school musical "Fame" — please, people, don't call it a remake — stays faithful to the spirit and structure of Alan Parker's original while sucking out all the raciness.

FILM | The "reinvention" of the

There's no nudity in this PG-rated version; no one gets an abortion. No one even lights a single cigarette. So, no, it's not exactly the most realistic depiction of modern high school life.

But at the same time, dancer and choreographer Kevin Tancharoen, making his feature directing debut, doesn't turn "Fame" into the kind of slick, overly edited eye candy you might expect. It's stylized,

'FAME!'

- → DIRECTOR: Kevin Tancharoen
 → STARS: Naturi Naughton,

yes, and it moves fluidly while still maintaining some urban grittiness.

And in a world where people aspire for instant recognition by making idiots of themselves on reality TV, there's still something appealing about the idea of working hard for artistic glory.

Starting with Debbie Allen's famous "you got big dreams, you want fame" speech over the opening titles, "Fame" follows a group of aspiring singers, dancers, actors and musicians from their auditions for New York's competitive High School of Performing Arts until their graduation four years later.

Among the faculty are Kelsey Grammer as the stern but fair piano teacher and Bebe Neuwirth, formidable as always, as a dance instructor. Megan Mullally plays a perky voice coach and Allen herself, in all of two scenes, appears as the school's principal.

Some of these kids are obviously going to make it, and some aren't. At some point, they'll all burst into spontaneous song and dance in the cafeteria. These are inescapable truisms.

Familiar? Yes, but not nearly as vapid as most of the musical material out there that encourages teens to believe fame is all that matters. CHRISTY LEMIRE (AP)

One of the best things about "Surrogates" is Bruce Willis' sleek Ken-doll hairstyle.

Robots in Human Disguise

'Surrogates' borrows from recent sci-fi flicks to create its bizarre virtual reality

FILM | "Surrogates," directed by Jonathan Mostow and adapted from a graphic novel by Robert Venditti, is itself a surrogate, a kind of stand-in for many of the sci-fi movies of the recent past. In it, you'll recognize ideas from "Blade Runner," "Minority Report" and even "WALL-E."

The Bruce Willis action flick opens with two murders — the first in years in a quasi-present-day Boston. Technology has advanced enough so that nearly everyone has a surrogate - or "surry" for short. While reclining at home, people control a robotic version of themselves that safely maneuvers through the world.

The surrogates are a fantasy version of one's self - cosmetically perfect, thinner, younger and sometimes of the opposite sex. (This means, most importantly, that we have a blond Bruce Willis on our hands.)

Willis is a police detective named Greer who, along with his partner (Radha Mitchell), is trying to solve the murders that, though committed on surrogates, also "liquefied" the brains of their human operators.

The surrogates are a clear metaphor for the virtual reality that's already upon us. It's a subject popular in Hollywood these days, given the recent Gerard Butler film "Gamer" and James Cameron's upcoming film "Avatar."

But this supposed utopia is also a superficial wasteland, devoid of meaning. As the investigation into the murders goes deeper, a plot to destroy the network unfurls.

The surrogates are a fantasy version of one's self - cosmetically perfect, thinner and younger.

Meanwhile, some people choose to live in human-only areas; the leader of these renegades is played by a dreadlocked Ving Rhames.

"We're not meant to experience the world through a machine," Rhames' character announces. It's an ironic sentiment coming from a film projector beamed into a state-of-the-art movie theater. JAKE COYLE (AP)

Poetry in Motion Picture

Abbie Cornish shines as John Keats' true love in the dynamic movie 'Bright Star'

FILM | In telling the story of the final years in the brief life of poet John Keats, "Bright Star" very easily could have been a stuffy, period costume drama.

Instead, writer-director Jane Campion has fashioned a fascinating mix of contradictions. Her film is at once gritty and ethereal, grounded and romantic, quaint and contemporary. Those appealing contrasts extend to the casting choices, too, with the pale, reserved Ben Whishaw playing off the vibrant, assured Abbie Cornish.

John (Ben Whishaw) and Fanny (Abbie Cornish) connect though a wall. Sigh.

One of the smartest moves [director] Campion made was to focus on a short, pivotal period for Keats.

One of the smartest moves Campion made was to focus on a short, pivotal period for Keats, rather than trying to construct a comprehensive (and potentially cursory) biopic. "Bright Star" follows the three-year relationship that began in 1818 between the writer and Fanny Brawne, his next-door neighbor in Hampstead, London. It was a time of great productivity for him, as we'd later come to appreciate, but it's also when he experienced his only true love.

Campion depicts the lovers' story from Fanny's perspective. Keats' words — from some of his best-known poems, including "Endymion," "Ode to a Nightingale" and the titular, Fannyinspired "Bright Star" — crop up organically throughout the picture, rather than arriving in big, stagy recitations. But the ache of young love is all hers, and, as our guide, Cornish provides a compelling directness. Christy Lemire (AP)

Cleveland Brown Takes the Lead

A minor 'Family Guy' character earns his very own TV series

TV | "What the hell? He's getting his own show?" These are the words uttered by an incredulous Stewie in the first 10 minutes of "The Cleveland Show," a brand-new "Family Guy" spin-off premiering Sunday at 8:30 p.m. on Fox.

Sure, Cleveland Brown (voiced by Mike Henry) is always good for a laugh in Peter's shadow, but can his soft-spoken persona lead a series? The answer is probably not — unless a smart bunch of producers give him a funny supporting cast to help.

The premise of "The Cleveland Show" hinges upon his divorcing his wife, Loretta, and leaving Quahog (and all things Griffin-family related) behind. Rerouted on his way to California, he and his son, Cleveland Jr., find themselves in Stoolbend, Va., Cleveland Sr.'s hometown. There, they encounter Cleveland's long-lost love Donna, along with her precocious toddler and teenage daughter. Throw in a talking bear, two new drinking buddies and a bar called the Broken Stool, and you've got déjà vu all over again.

Indeed, "The Cleveland Show" is less a spin-off and more a "Family Guy" parallel universe. Complete with random cutaways and, again, a talking animal, "The Cleveland Show" is so similar to "Family Guy" that it's almost mocking itself.

The one key difference, however, is that this show introduces the first black family into primetime animation. There was Homer Simpson, Hank Hill, Stan Smith and Peter Griffin, and now, there's Cleveland Brown. Diversity stands alone as a positive, but "The Cleveland Show" also explores racial dynamics in its comedy that the other shows can't touch. It even uses some of this to poke fun at its creators — for example, a scene in which Donna's daughter watches "a show white people make they think black people will watch."

The pilot episode isn't anywhere close to "Family Guy" caliber, but with some character development and some work, "The Cleveland Show" may yet find its footing and become a Sunday night staple.

ALL ABOUT STEVE (PG-I3, 97 minutes) There are few things more cinematically satisfying than Sandra Bullock in her wheelhouse. But it's singularly excruciating to watch as she contorts herself into a role that's all wrong for her. This gruesome, almost perversely un-funny movie about a crossword puzzle constructor who obsessively follows a man across the country may get an asterisk on Bullock's résumé as the most misguided move of her career. Bullock's Mary Magdalene Horowitz chases a news cameraman named Steve (Bradley Cooper), who she nearly mauls on a blind date before they even pull away from the curb. Bullock lisps and quips her way through a movie that is by turns cruel and unusual, culminating in a tortured critique of contemporary media and conformism. (AH)

THE BAADER MEINHOF COMPLEX

(R. 150 minutes) This deeply unsettling account of a group of young German activists that morphed into a murderous gang of domestic terrorists opens in 1967, when journalist Ulrike Meinhof (Martina Gedeck), like many Germans, is outraged at the killing of an unarmed demonstrator at a rally in Berlin. Several months later, activists Gudrun Ensslin (Johanna Wokalek) and Andreas Baader (Moritz Bleibtreu) are arrested after firebombing a department store to protest the war in Vietnam. In 1970, after interviewing Ensslin, Meinhof agrees to help Baader escape from prison. For the next several years, their group, the Red Army Faction, would embark on a violent campaign that was initially greeted with the admiration accorded to folk heroes and outlaws but ultimately held the country in a murderous thrall. CLOUDY WITH A CHANCE OF

MEATBALLS (PG, 81 minutes) It's true that any film that crams so many jokes into its brief running time risks making audiences feel as overstuffed as if they'd just eaten a school-size pancake. That's why it's a lucky thing that so many of the jokes are great! Writer-directors Phil Lord and Chris Miller populate the island of Swallow Falls with wacky characters and let them loose in inventive ways. Take would-be scientist Flint Lockwood (voice of Bill Hader), who wears the indestructible spray-on shoes that made him a laughingstock as a child, and police chief Earl Deveraux (Mr. T), whose love for his son is matched only by his love for short shorts. Salvation for the residents of depressed Swallow Falls, stuck eating sardines every day, Flint's latest invention makes it rain cheeseburgers. And bacon. And ice cream. But when Flint's device goes haywire and Swallow Falls is menaced by a perfect storm of enormous food, it's up to the colorful characters to save the day. (DK) DISTRICT 9 (R, II2 minutes) The poison that permeates this phenomenal film is the same toxin that defined so much of 20th-century history: the oppression of the Other — in this case, scaly aliens with feelers for faces, a jones for canned cat food and a mother ship that has been hovering over Johannesburg for 20 years. The underlying gravitas of the story, in which aliens are warehoused in camps and used for gruesome experiments, keeps director Neill Blomkamp's film smart, even as the aliens are turning their pursuers into Heinz 57 Sauce. As the craven corporate tool Wikus van de Merwe, acting newcomer Sharlto Copley is nothing short of revelatory. Wikus is assigned to move the aliens from their ramshackle township to tent cities that are, in fact, concentration camps. The aliens are hard to like, but we like them, just as we end up liking Wikus and rooting for the demise of Greater Human Civilization. (JA)

EXTRACT (R, 91 minutes) Jason Bateman,

LIE DETECTOR: "The Informant!" stars Matt Damon as an FBI mole with a strange perception of what telling the truth means.

Kristen Wiig, Mila Kunis, David Koechner, Ben Affleck and their abuser — writer-director Mike Judge, creator of "Office Space" and TV's "King of the Hill" — have violated the trust of their respective fan bases by participating in what may be the most disappointing American comedy of the decade. Bateman is the owner of a food-flavoring factory in a nondescript suburb of gated communities and hotel bars. His traitless wife (Wiig) won't have sex with him. His best friend is a scuzzy, pill-popping bartender played by Affleck. It's too timid to be black comedy, too inert to be slapstick, too unfocused and dull to be a takedown of the suburbs or of married life. As it is, it's a major step back for all involved. Don't see this movie. (DZ)

(500) DAYS OF SUMMER (PG-I3, 95 minutes) This romance understands that we mark our lives by our scrapes and defeats with love rather than by the white wedding-cake successes. It's a drama that, at first blush, would seem excruciatingly ordinary: the 500-day affair between Tom, who believes wholeheartedly in love, and Summer, who isn't sure about love at all. What makes us connect is Tom's funny, morose and ironic commentary as he does his damndest to reach the heart of a woman whose idea of lover and friend is, well, confusing. (DT)

THE FINAL DESTINATION (R, 82 minutes) In the latest unoriginal, exhausted sequel, these movies have been reduced to bland killing machines, though this one features aggressive use of 3-D, with everything from race cars, tires and engines to nails from a nail gun, entrails and blood blasting off the screen into our laps. Blandly acted by players who seem resigned to the paycheck rather than terrified by the prospect of death or paralyzed by fear or even morbidly fascinated by their impending doom, this one is certainly worth a pass. Of the blasé cast, only Mykelti Williamson, as a security guard who accepts his fate with the help of his faith, and Nick Zano, playing a rude, crude and funny frat-boy jerk, stand out. ORLANDO SENTINEL

HALLOWEEN II (R, 101 minutes) Writerdirector Rob Zombie's retooling of John Carpenter's 1981 film delivers that old slasher magic, replete with graphic gore unseen in the earlier movies. The old formula applies: We find qualmless, stabby serial killer Michael Myers alive (again) and on the loose (again) and willing to kill any baby sitter, beast or pedestrian he encounters in Haddonfield, Ill., on Halloween night. Generally, he stabs people. Throughout, Zombie introduces some Michael (Tyler Mane) backstory and far more blood than Carpenter could have dreamed of. Some films might be said to be mountain-shaped, escalating to a peak before descending. Zombie's is more like a vast plateau — a plateau strewn with shards of glass. Which is to say that it's very effective at scaring the flipping flip out of you, buth McCann

PRINCE (PG, 153 minutes) Love potions, common-room snogging, adolescent heartbreak. It's hard to blame the film's screenwriter, Steve Kloves, or director, David Yates, for focusing on the romance. After all, as young-adult adventures go, the sixth book in the "Harry Potter" series is awfully light on the adventure. (DK)

THE HURT LOCKER (R, 130 minutes) Kathryn Bigelow's captivating, completely immersive action thriller is set in Iraq in 2004, but it transcends time and place, and in the process attains something universal and enduring. Viewers are plunged into the disorienting world of the soldiers who disarm what Americans have come to know as IEDs, or roadside bombs, neither of which does full justice to the carnage they inflict. Steven Soderbergh delivers a cool, slyly funny psychological caper in which the true-life tale of a corporate whistleblower is extruded through Soderbergh's dry sense of satire and nostalgia for 1970s cinema style into a nifty, if a bit bloodless, bagatelle. A virtually unrecognizable Matt Damon plays Mark Whitacre, who in the 1990s exposed price fixing at Archer Daniels Midland, where he worked as a high-level executive. Doing his best Philip Seymour Hoffman impersonation, the porn-mustached and well-padded Damon keeps up a chirpy interior monologue throughout, digressing into woolly meditations that ping manically from corn to Japanese sex fetishes. It all clicks along with satisfying wit and weirdness, and through it all Soderbergh retains his characteristic reserve and distance from the action at hand. (AH)

INGLOURIOUS BASTERDS (R, 151 minutes) Quentin Tarantino manages to simultaneously surprise and revert to form in this film. The surprise lies in his choice of period and subject matter. Set in France during World War II, the film tells the fictionalized story of a special squad of American Jews whose mission to kill and capture German soldiers was uniquely practical and symbolic. But from the admittedly breathtaking opening sequence, the film isn't about history or war - it's a movie about other movies. Brad Pitt stars as Lt. Aldo Raine, who early in the movie is shown assembling a group of Jewish soldiers whose mission is to do "one thing and one thing only: to kill Nazis." Pitt's character ends his speech by announcing that he's part Apache and as such will insist that each of his men - the titular IBs - owes him "one hunnert Nattzie scalps." Because it's Tarantino, viewers can rest assured that we'll see those scalps being taken. If only the Allies had Tarantino on their

IT MIGHT GET LOUD (PG, 97 minutes) Jimmy Page, the Edge and Jack White, three of the more influential guitarists of several generations, start a little fire-byfret during director Davis Guggenheim's film, which depicts wood, lacquer and hardware the way Hugh Hefner depicts Miss September. The documentary was conceived as a tribute to the electric guitar, easily the most important musical development of the rock era, maybe even the 20th century. The principals here, however - the elegant Page, the modest Edge and the cocky White — are strictly hands-on in achieving a singular sound that is, amid the clangor of mainstream musical traffic, distinctive and personal. Guggenheim, who won an Oscar for "An Inconvenient Truth," makes all this guitar/guitarist worship both cinematic and delicious. One needn't have a Stratocaster

NICE CATCH! Flint Lockwood (voiced by Bill Hader) grabs a midair burger in the film "Cloudy With a Chance of Meatballs."

moldering in the closet at home to get a kick out of this film full of personality and charm and a charisma level that's set at around II. (JA)

JENNIFER'S BODY (R, 102 minutes)

Megan Fox makes a subversive plaything of her smokin' hottie persona as Jennifer Check, a high school queen bee who, after an ugly encounter with a van full of rock musicians, becomes a raging succubus with a taste for Type B ("Boy") blood. Amanda Seyfried plays Jennifer's bookish pal Needy (get it?), who twigs to her BFF's psycho-weirdness and could very well pay for that insight with her life.

The film was written by Diablo Cody, who won an Oscar for her quippy "Juno" script; here Cody's compulsive cuteness is particularly cloying and mannered. Still, the movie introduces a little feminism to a genre that for too long has been predicated on female victimization. And director Karyn Kusama ("Girlfight") handles the structural imperatives with solid timing and occasional panache. (AH)

JULIE AND JULIA (PG, I18 minutes)
Two movies battle for pride of place in Nora Ephron's adaptation of memoirs by blogger Julie Powell and culinary legend
Julia Child. Either way, Powell's whiny, sad-sack self-absorption is no match for Child's spirit, strength of character and joie de vivre, a fact made painfully clear in a movie that soars whenever Child (Meryl Streep) is on the screen and sags when Powell shows up. (AH)

is the rare Hollywood romance concerned with emotions other than love at first sight. Sure, its mismatched partners - Jennifer Aniston as Eloise, a florist unlucky in love; and Aaron Eckhart as Burke, a best-selling author of self-help books - meet, trade barbs and have several quirky dates. But there's a deep vein of grief running through the script: Burke leads seminars in which he helps the bereaved deal with the deaths of loved ones, based on his experience after his wife died in a car accident. Behind closed doors, he's falling apart. Meanwhile, Eloise secretly writes SAT vocabulary words on hotel walls; she saves ings; she smokes hookahs at slam poetry readings. Unfortunately, Burke is saddled with a big secret regarding the death of his wife, which feels like it's transplanted from another, much worse film. (DK) and new prospects. Most turn out to be bums, heels, users or psychos. As George, the central character and narrator of the story, Lerman has the most believable presence in the picture. But he has to work with Rendall's one-note turn as his quippy gay brother, and Zellweger's off-note performance as a sort of Blanche DuBois of Manhattan. (DT)

THE SEPTEMBER ISSUE (PG-I3, 90 minutes) Here's the thing about Vogue: You don't read it once. You read it as often as you please, cover to cover, including the ads, and you still don't learn the secret of fashion. And that's what director R.J. Cutler's Vogue documentary is like. It's delicious and ensnaring and easy on the eyes, but it can't give you the definitive truth about notoriously frosty Vogue editor Anna Wintour. Bypassing most of the big-time hustling-bustling Vogue activity, the film shows us Wintour in more revealing situations: among friends, or at least intimates. Of course, we want to know about Wintour (and what we learn is that she can reduce a room full of gents to near tears). An addictive, sly fox of a film, it proffers a clearer, though still inevitably obscured view of the massive Vogue world, BUTH MCCANN

SORORITY ROW (R, IOI minutes) Perhaps it's a sign of our ill-mannered times that a slasher film about the murder of sorority girls elicits no sympathy for them. The girls are mean, promiscuous and shallow. It begins when the girls play a prank on a guy. They let him think the sex-enhancing drug he had given to one of their sisters killed her. His panicked reaction soon turns her fake death real. They drop her body down a shaft and pledge secrecy. On graduation weekend, a slasher starts killing the Theta Pi girls and anyone who gets in the way. JANE HORWITZ

THE TIME TRAVELER'S WIFE (PG-13, IO7 minutes) In German director Robert Schwentke's adaptation of Audrey Niffenegger's novel, the lovely Rachel McAdams, as Clare, returns to the genre of her most beloved movie, "The Notebook." Here, her true love, Henry (Eric Bana), is afflicted by a "rare" (i.e., ridiculous) genetic abnormality that causes him to abruptly leave the present tense for eras unknown, returning who knows when and in what kind of shape. It's the kind of mutant disorder that makes a committed relationship an impossibility: Tell him to take out the garbage and he ends up in the '60s. (JA)

TYLER PERRY'S I CAN DO BAD ALL BY

est comedy-laced morality tale from Tyler Perry feels even more formulaic than its predecessors. It is so predictable that the emotional punches land with a sermonizing thud. April (Taraji P. Henson) sings in a club, drinks a lot and has a married boyfriend, Randy (Brian J. White). When teenage niece Jennifer (Hope Olaide Wilson) and younger nephews try to rob Madea's house, Madea (Perry) brings them to their aunt's door. Wilma (Gladys Knight) and Pastor Brian (Marvin Winans) urge April to take in her kin, then they send over the handsome Sandino (Adam Rodriguez) to fix up her house. Sandino has an instant rapport with the kids, but Randy is trouble. Jane Horwitz

WHITEOUT (R, 96 minutes) A chimpanzee could've finger-painted a better movie; a chimpanzee somewhere in the world probably has. Attention, chimpanzee: Send your finger-painted screenplay to Tom Skerritt. He'll sign on for it. He signed up for this film. Kate Beckinsale is Carrie Stetko, a U.S. marshal stationed in Antarctica. Skerritt plays the station's grizzled doctor, who everyone calls (wait for it) "Doc." Carrie and Doc are reaching the end of a two-year stint at the base, but plans change when a mangled, frozen body is discovered. The discovery of the corpse is the starting point for a bewildering meander underscored by Carrie's back story. (DZ)

Man Behaving Badly

On a new season of 'Californication,' Hank is as foolish as ever

MATURITY | Hank Moody, the hero of Showtime's comedy "Californication," is a roguish struggling novelist who says whatever is on his mind and feels a tug from every member of the opposite sex.

He might get into less trouble if he kept his lip buttoned and his fly zipped. But that wouldn't be Hank, nor would it be "Californication," which mines laughs (and, occasionally, gasps) from Hank's erotic misadventures, and those of his sexed-up fellow travelers.

Starring David Duchovny, "Californication" begins its third season Sunday at 10 p.m. with Hank's landing a much-needed teaching job at a local college. This is thanks to a professor who is the sexy mother of a friend of Hank's teenage daughter Becca (Madeleine Martin).

David Duchovny plays Hank Moody, whose hobbies include drinking and women.

Here in academia, Hank is primed to seduce his new colleague (whose husband, the dean of the college, is his boss), while a graduate assistant and a sassy coed are also on Hank's radar.

"I call it adult comedy," says Duchovny, "but not in the tripleX sense. It's adult comedy because the characters are acting foolish but not acting like children. I see most mainstream American comedies with adults acting like children. Hank is childish, but he's not a child. He's a man acting childishly." Frazier moore (AP)

PRODUCTION Hire Neal Patrick Harris "The People's Choice Awards" has announced that it's chosen Mark Burnett to produce next year's broadcast. Burnett - whose TV hits include "Survivor," "The Apprentice" and Martha Stewart's weekday show — says he will reinvigorate the awards program, now in its 36th year. The goal is entertaining the audience, not self-congratulation by the winners, he says. (AP)

"Two games is a little early to panic about your team, Redskins or not. However, it's perfectly OK to be a little worried."

COMMENTER VEGGIETART

"Knowledgeable fans knew coming into the season that the defense would have to carry this team, and that if the offense did just enough to win, it could sneak into the playoffs. Things are playing out largely as expected."

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Some of the things you are usually able to accomplish on your own are likely to require help. Accept it when offered -gracefully.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) If you haven't been getting enough rest lately, your work is sure to suffer; you may be risking more than your reputation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) When others call it quits for the day, you're likely to swing into action — and impress many with your ability to do the impossible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You can do much more when others are not looking over your shoulder. Of course, you don't want to be completely ignored, either.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Fact may well be stranger than fiction when all is said and done - and you may very well find yourself at the center of the storm.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You should be able to pass an important halfway mark, but don't be fooled. Your greatest efforts lie ahead of you, surely.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're going to have to put in a little extra effort in order to come through for someone who has been depending on you for a while.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're not about to believe what the experts tell you about your odds at this time. Indeed, you'll surprise many by what you can accomplish.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Solitary efforts enable you to put the finishing touches on something that has been nearing completion for a while. CANCER (June 21-July 22) You can propel yourself much more quickly ahead of the pack through sheer determination. Form is less important than function.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may seem to be at rest, but you'll very likely be thinking up one way after another to achieve a new goal when given the chance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You've been paying attention to the wrong details lately, but you'll realize it and correct the error before it's too late.

SAMURAI SUDOKU | HARD

Fill in each column, row and 3x3 box with the digits I through 9 without repeating any. The twist in Samurai Sudoku is that the digits that appear in the overlapping boxes must work for both puzzles. A piece of advice to get you started: Don't focus on completing one grid at a time. Keep the whole puzzle in mind as you go, because filling in a number in one grid could give you clues to another.
